Keywords

Scandinavian literatures, literature and context

Position of the course

This course complements the course "Nordic Literature: Advanced Topics I". While the course "Advanced Topics I" concentrates on text-oriented approaches, this class also focuses on contextual approaches.

Contents

The course focuses on contextual approaches to studying Nordic literatures. Focal point is the context in which literary texts function.

Topics within this scope may include: literary-sociological issues, literary historiography and canonizing, reception and mediation of Nordic literatures and issues of translation.

The course is conducted as a seminar discussing relevant texts on contextual research into Nordic literatures.

Initial competences

Students must have a bachelor in linguistics and literature with Swedish as one of the languages studied.

Final competences

- 1 being familiar with contextual approaches to the literary study of Scandinavian literatures.
- 2 having advanced knowledge of Scandinavian literatures
- 3 reporting synthetically on contextual research into Scandinavian literatures.
- 4 evaluating critically contextual research on Scandinavian literatures.

- 5 discussing scientifically about contextual research into Scandinavian literatures.
- 6 reporting in Swedish (CEFR-level: C1) on own research findings, both orally and in writing (without using GAI tools in text production and/or editing).
