Position of the course

This advanced course offers a diachronical, thematic approach of the religious past and enlarges the chronological courses on Antiquity, the Middle Ages, the Early Modern and the Modern Times of BA1 and BA2.

Starting from a special focus upon the role of religion in processes of socialisation and cultural appropriation, the course helps students gain insight in the 'longue durée' of European cultural history and historical mentalities. They are explicitly confronted with interdisciplinary approaches, of which they should learn to critically assess the value for historical research.

Contents

This course focuses primarily on the role of religion in social and cultural history across Europe. It is structured around central topics that are not only current in recent research but also relevant to questions of religion and society in Europe today.

The course is thus not comprehensive but selective, with an emphasis on the Ancient and Late Modern periods. It will help to discover interdisciplinary relations with insights deriving from cultural anthropology, sociology of religion, religious studies, and art history.

Note: this course places heavy emphasis on reading and discussion. Students must come to class having read all assigned (1) primary sources and (2) secondary literature carefully. They must also have them to hand during class and be prepared to engage them actively.

Initial competences

To have successfully completed the courses History of the Classical Antiquity, History of the Middle Ages, Early modern History and History of the Modern and Contemporary Period or to have acquired the necessary skills by other means. Good active knowledge of English is required (speaking, reading, writing). Passive knowledge of French and German (reading) is recommended.

Final competences

- 1 To be able to discover cultural historical correlations throughout history.
- 2 To be acquainted with the most important theoretical and methodological debates in today's cultural history.
- 3 To be able to integrate critically the insights from other human sciences in historical research.
- 4 To be able to formulate, explain, and defend a decent cultural historical argumentation orally.

Participation: collaboration in group work, engagement in class discussion

Oral exam: open questions based on the lectures, readings, discussions, and student presentations

Calculation of the examination mark

Combination of continuous assessment (2 presentations and weekly participation, for 40% of total score) and periodical evaluation (oral exam, for 60% of the total score).

If different group members clearly show a different degree of input, then the final mark per student belonging to the same group can still differ.

The deadlines for the presentations must be respected. If not, a mark can be deducted from the total.

When the student obtains less than 10/20 for at least one of the components, they can no longer pass the course unit as a whole. If the total score does turn out to be a mark of ten or more out of twenty, this is reduced to the highest fail mark (9/20).

Facilities for Working Students

Facilities:

- Possible exemption from educational activities requiring student attendance; tasks are imposed in substitution after discussion with the lecturer
- Possible rescheduling of the examination to a different time in the same academic year
- Feedback can be given during an appointment during and after office hours
