Teaching languages

Dutch

Keywords

language and politics, language and power, multilingualism, discourse analysis, language ideology, media

Position of the course

raising students' awareness of the social functions of specific text genres, in a context of globalisation, digitalisation and multilingualism in the Dutch language area

Contents

Terms like 'verfransing' [Frenchification], 'asielzoeker' [asylum seeker], 'nultolerantie' [zero tolerance] and 'woke': who uses them why, in which texts and with which effect? Do our ways of speaking and writing about language contribute to social inclusion and exclusion of speakers? Who determines what can be said about varieties, their speakers and specific groups in society?

In the first half of the semester, we will explore how Critical Discourse Analysis can be used to critically examine public debates in a broad historical, social and political context. A theoretical and methodological introduction (blended learning) will be followed by examples of recent research, e.g. on discourses on English Medium Instruction in Higher Education in the Low Countries.

In the second half of the semester, students will carry out their own small-scale discourse analyses about discourse(s) on a socially relevant topic in the Dutch language area. They will present the results in a paper (3000 à 5000 words). Moreover, students will present (1) their research plan (online) and (2) their first results (on campus). It is possible to collaborate in teams of two.

Initial competences basic knowledge of the Dutch language system and use (cf. Bachelor)

Final competences

- 1 to be able to critically evaluate the representation of language and multilingualism (and other socially relevant topics) in public discourse in Belgium
- 2 to be able to identify (language) ideologies which inform a specific kind of argumentation
- 3 to be able to identify and name discursive strategies
- 4 to be able to relate discourse on language and multilingualism to the historical context of Belgium
- 5 getting acquainted with theory and methods of Critical Discourse Analysis
- 6 to be able to present results from empirical research (1) in an (online) oral presentation and (2) in a scientific paper

examination during the second examination period is possible in modified form

Extra information on the examination methods participation, presentation (online / on campus), paper

Calculation of the examination mark

Permanent evaluation participation (10%), presentation (40%), written assignment (50%)
In case students do not participate in all evaluations or get a score lower than 8/20 for one form of evaluation, they cannot pass the course. In this case, if the average of the partial evaluations yields a score of 10 or higher, it will be reduced to 9/20.

Students are expected to develop their reading, listening, writing and speaking skills during all activities and tasks inside and outside of the classroom. For evaluation, we expect a language proficiency that is adequate for the course's place in the curriculum.
