Teaching languages

Italian, English

Keywords

Prosody, rhythm, intonation, syntax-prosody interface, prosodic structure, intonational phonology

Position of the course

This specialized course deepens student's understanding of the phonology of the Italian and other languages and the relationship between syntax and phonology.

The course focuses on:

- a) prosodic phonology
- b) intonational phonology
- c) syntax-prosody interface

Contents

The course aims to familiarize students with the prosodic phonology and its relationship to the information structure and syntax in Italian and other languages.

This course covers the following topics:

- introduction to acoustic phonetics
- prosodic hierarchy
- Intonation: introduction to the Autosegmental-Metrical theory
- The relationship between intonation, syntax and information structure (syntax-prosody interface)

The theory is illustrated by means of a series of examples.

Initial competences

Knowledge of syntax, phonology and pragmatics at BA-level.

Final competences

- 1 Insight into the theory: The student uses the linguistic terminology correctly. He/she understands the most important points of phonological theory and of the relationship between phonology and phonetics, and phonology and syntax
- 2 Insight into the theory: The student can relate the content of the course to insights gained in other linguistics courses
- 3 Application of the theory: The student can independently analyze an audio fragment and can explain the most important phonetic, phonological and syntactic properties of the fragment
- 4 Research skills: the student can write a structured paper in which he analyzes a text and compares various possible analyzes. He / she analyzes and annotates audio fragments with Praat (spoken language analysis program) and has insight into the problems of segmentation, annotation and analysis of spoken language
- 5 Research skills: the student can independently search for, consult and critically report on scientific sources
