Teaching languages

German, English, Dutch

Keywords

History, culture, German-speaking countries

Position of the course

In this introductory course, students are familiarised with various aspects from both the history of the German-speaking countries and the 'Landeskunde' and culture of the German-speaking countries.

Contents

The course consists of three part of four weeks each: Landeskunde, History, Culture. Landeskunde and Culture are taught in German, History is taught in English.

The Landeskunde part covers various aspects of the German-speaking countries such as geography, population, the political system, the media etc. The emphasis is on Germany, but other German-speaking countries such as East Belgium are dealt with.

The History part, all periods from the Middle Ages until the present day are dealt with in chronological order. These lectures are taught in English. For each weekly lecture, there is a mandatory reading assignment in German.

The Culture part finally covers the history of German-medium culture up to the present. For each weekly lecture, there is a mandatory reading assignment in German.

Initial competences

general historical, geographical, political and cultural knowledge from secondary education.

Final competences

- 1 To demonstrate insight into important historical, political and cultural aspects of the German-speaking countries.
- 2 To demonstrate knowledge of the culture of the German-speaking countries in the wider sense, including e.g. cultural history and aspects of civic culture.
- 3 To demonstrate an overview of the outlines (and possibly constants) of the history of the German-speaking countries.
- 4 To apply the above-named knowledge and insights in the interpretation of topical developments in the German-speaking countries.
