Normative ethics

Position of the course

This basic course wants to help students gain basic knowledge of the most important schools in normative ethics.

Contents

A thorough analysis is given of the major theories including utilitarianism and consequentialism, virtue ethics, feminist ethics and Kantianism. These theories are studied on the basis of the writings of philosophers who represent the different schools.

Initial competences

To have some knowledge about ethics.

Final competences

- 1 To have knowledge of the strengths and weaknesses of the different normative theories.
- 2 To be able to apply the perspectives on concrete ethical problems.
- 3 To be able to read mainstream articles on ethics in scholarly journals.
