Teaching languages

German

Keywords

German, linguistics, language variation, historical linguistics, language typology, sociolinguistics

Position of the course

Nobody speaks German the way it is written. But why? In this specialising course, students gain insights into the most important patterns of variation in German in a wider diachronic, diatopic and sociolinguistic perspective. It is intended as a preparation of the advanced variationist and historical courses in the Master.

Contents

The course is devoted to the historical, geographic, and social dimensions of variation in present-day German. Students get the chance to collect and process new data in their own, hands-on research project (e.g. transcription of spoken language), which they then interpret theoretically in a poster presentation in small groups. For this presentation, they will need to formulate a research question and independently consult relevant background literature. This research project contributes 50% to the final grade.

The necessary techniques for academic writing and speaking will be rehearsed and advanced. There is a tutorial (7.5 hours) in addition to the course, where special attention is paid to this.

COVID-19:

As a consequence of the Corona crisis the following temporary adaptations are possible:

- The course may make use of Blended Learning.
- If the situation requires, the course will be taught synchronously online (livestream of the class with interaction possibilities (chat / oral discussion)). Online Q&A moments will be available in that case. This has an influence on the number of contact hours: synchronous online contact will exceptionally have to replace personal contact this term.
- In such cases, the livestream will be recorded in order to facilitate the asynchronous processing of the material taught.

Initial competences

To have completed all prior compulsory courses in German Linguistics and German Language Proficiency or to have acquired the necessary skills by other means.

Final competences

- 1 To have gained an insight into the major variation patterns of present-day German.
- 2 To be able to interpret these variation patterns from a sociolinguistic and historical perspective (broadly defined), and to appreciate the relevant methodological approaches and issues.

3 To formulate a research question.

4 To be able to adequately handle the relevant linguistic literature and self-collected research data in a poster presentation.

5 Use academic German proficiently at an advanced level.

6 Listening / understanding skills (in the context of the research project)

Conditions for credit contract

examination during the second examination period is possible

Extra information on the examination methods

Assessment moment

Post-sessional (50%) and in-sessional (50%)

Assessment form

- Post-sessional: written exam
- In-sessional: research project incl. poster presentation, participation

The students must participate in both parts of the evaluation to be able to pass.

Calculation of the examination mark

50 % written exam

50 % participation

Important:

If the student does not pass the in-sessional assessment, a second opportunity is offered through a compensatory activity between the first and second exam periods.

If the student does not participate in the in-sessional OR postsessional evaluation, or has less than 10/20 for one of the evaluations, they can no longer pass the course as a whole. In case the average of the final score is equal to or higher than 10/20, the average is reduced to the highest non-passing grade (=9).

Facilities for Working Students

1. Possible exemption from educational activities requiring student attendance
2. Possible rescheduling of the examination to a different time in the same academic year
3. Alternative time for feedback is possible
