Position of the course

Sanskrit is the classical language of India, used since at least 3500 years. As such it is the central language to the religious, literary, scientific and political culture of South Asia up to the 10th century. Moreover, all modern Indian languages either directly derive from Sanskrit, or incorporate a considerable amount of its vocabulary. Sanskrit, as well as Greek and Latin, has an extensive nominal and verbal system of inflection. The course gives the students and introduction into the Sanskrit grammar and teaches them the basics of the script.

Contents

The course starts with a theoretical exposition of Sanskrit script (Devanagari) and grammar: phonology and elementary morphology. The theory is put to practice in exercises, through which the student gradually learns and practises the script, translation, thematic translation, the application of the rules of assimilation (sandhi) and the elementary nominal and verbal inflection.

Initial competences

A basic knowledge of general grammatical terminology.

Final competences

- 1 a decent knowledge of the Sanskrit script (Devanagari), active and passive
- 2 active and passive knowledge of Sanskrit basic vocabulary

- 3 active and passive application of the rules of assimilation
- 4 active and passive knowledge of the most frequently employed nominal and verbal conjugations

Conditions for credit contract

Access to this course unit via a credit contract is unrestricted: the student takes into consideration the conditions mentioned in 'Starting Competences'

Conditions for exam contract
