Keywords

Archaeology, Bronze Age, Iron Age, Low Countries, Channel-North Sea area

Position of the course

As part of the Domain-specific knowledge courses, this advanced course is specifically aiming at a deeper and larger knowledge gathered in the first year. In this case: study of the protohistory (Bronze Age and Iron Age) of NW Europe and the Low Countries from the end of the 3rd millennium until the arrival of the Romans.

Contents

Detailed overview of the occupation history of the Low Countries in the Bronze Age and the Iron Age, related to the neighbouring countries. There is a focus on chronology, settlement patterns and structures, funeral practices, religion and ideology, social and economic aspects of the period, material culture, etc.

Initial competences

To have successfully completed the course Prehistory and Protohistory.

Final competences

- 1 To have a thorough critical insight into the evolution and processes occurring during the Bronze Age and the Iron Age in the Low Countries and in surrounding areas.
- 2 To have (basic) knowledge of the diversity and complexity of cultures from the Metal Ages in the Low Countries.

3 To be able to reflect critically on evolutions, developments and processes which characterise the Metal Ages in the Low Countries.
