Position of the course

This advanced course is part of a series Domain specific practice courses, which aims at teaching students the techniques and methods of describing and illustrating archaeological material, building on the course Introduction to materials. This course will focus on typology and technology of different categories of artefacts, both of local and imported nature, from the Middle Ages and later periods.

Contents

Survey of the evolution of mainly ceramics (typology and technology), but also of some other categories of objects from the mediaeval and later periods.

Initial competences

- To have successfully completed the course Introduction to Materials.
- To have successfully completed (or to follow simultaneously) the course Archaeology of the Middle Ages and the Early Modern period.

Final competences

- 1 To be able to generally determinate artefacts from the medieval and early modern period
- 2 To have general insight into the typology and technology of different objects from the mediaeval and later periods.
- 3 To understand the methodology of the study of archaeological material.
- 4 To have basic knowledge on several areas of mediaeval pottery by direct contact with the material.
- 5 To be able to use the result of the study of materials in a general site interpretation by reference to existent case studies.
- 6 To be able to critical reflect about the relation between specific groups of finds and their contexts
- 7 To be able to recognise and analyse mediaeval objects.
