Position of the course

This basic course will help students become acquainted with the problems of interpreting philosophical texts from Antiquity, the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, (read in translation); students will be confronted with a number of different modern interpretations of ancient, medieval and renaissance texts.

Contents

To read and comment a number of thematically linked philosophical texts (in translation) from ancient, medieval and renaissance philosophers, together with a number of modern interpretations.

Initial competences

Preferably: To have successfully completed the courses History of ancient philosophy and History of mediaeval philosophy or to have acquired the necessary skills by other means.

Final competences

- 1 To be able to read and interpret philosophical works written by ancient, medieval and renaissance authors, taking into account the historical context they were written in as well as the philosophical tradition they belong to.
- 2 To be able to analyse and summarise the argumentation of the texts discussed.
- 3 To be able to trace the theme of the anthology diachronically over several works.
- 4 To be able to discuss modern interpretations critically.
- 5 To be able to express personal philosophical reflections on the discussed texts.
- 6 To learn to read ancient philosophical texts independently, as well as recent scientific literature, to learn to write a paper about these texts, and to learn to participate in an oral debate.
