Position of the course

In this advanced course the student is asked to complete his / her Bachelor's degree to demonstrate his / her command of a number of core competencies of the degree by writing a scientific text of approximately 10,000 words (possibly with appendix). The student learns to explore research area broadly and under supervision, to prepare and plan research, to work out problems.

Contents

The theme is determined in consultation with the promoter and must be approved by him / her. The student provides a research paper based on literature research on a subject within one of the core areas of the study program: language and literature, discourse analysis, folklore studies, philology, anthropology, (cultural) history and Eastern European studies. All PhDs associated with the ZAP or AAP can act as promoter.

The skills for the Bachelor's thesis are taught within the Methodology I and II courses. Every student is entitled to 2 hours of supervision per semester. In the first semester, the contact moments mainly serve to set up the research and to steer it in the right direction. In the second semester there is guidance in the reading of submitted documents by the promoter and the joint discussion thereof. The promoter must read and discuss the research plan, one chapter and the introduction in detail. The other chapters may only be assessed and commented on on a sample basis. In total, the promoter may not read and comment on more than 40 percent of the bachelor's thesis.

Initial competences
