Position of the course

This course, pitched at the graduate academic level (master), builds on the knowledge and skills acquired in a BA-degree programma of Arabic and Islamic Studies, or equivalent. The course brings together various academic subjects that involve Islamic political thought, its study within —especially— the context of history and cultural studies, and (Arabic) text study (possibly in translation) at intermediate to advanced levels.

Contents

This course consists of a thorough study in regular seminars, from various empirically as well as theoretically informed perspectives, of themes relevant for an understanding of Islamic political theory and politics of truth in past and present. Subjects are annually selected in the context of contemporary relevance and/or the scholarly priorities of students and teacher. Reading and review assignments of, amongst others, relevant Arabic texts (possibly in translation) are an important contributing component.

Subjects that may be considered include: Islam and power, Islam and knowledge, Islam and the state, caliphate and imamate, Sunnism and Shiism, ideal leadership and ideal community, history and memory, politics and historiography, legitimacy and identity, Islamic norms and discursive realities, author and audience, extremism and orthodoxy, islam and modernity.

Initial competences

BA in Arabic and Islamic Studies, in History, or equivalent (including academic knowledge at undergraduate level of Islam as a religious, socio-cultural and historical phenomenon)

Final competences

1 To identify and problematise the complexity of Islamic political thought in past and present.

- 2 To identify and problematise the added value of different disciplines for the resolution of complex questions pertaining to Islamic political thought.
- 3 To identify and problematise current theoretical discussions in the academic field of Islamic political thought.
- 4 To identify and problematise current empirical discussions in the academic field of Islamic political thought.
- 5 To apply independently current theoretical discussions in the academic field of Islamic political thought.
- 6 To apply independently current empirical discussions in the academic field of Islamic political thought.
- 7 To interpret results of individual research about Islamic political thought and to apply these in academically valid ways.
- 8 To reflect critically and in independent and systematic ways about learning, thinking, deciding and acting in the context of Islamic political thought.
- 9 To construct valid academic arguments around complex problems related to Islamic political thought.
- 10 To engage in written and oral communication, with peers and with others, about the results of independent learning, thinking and acting with respect to complex questions related to Islamic political thought.
- 11 To collaborate, in a context of diversity, trans-cultural realities, and historical consciousness, on complex questions related to Islamic political thought.
- 12 To have a critical consciousness about the relevance of knowledge about Islamic political thought for a variety of current social issues, events, debates and opinions.
- 13 To have a critical consciousness about the significance of an advanced knowledge of 'Classical' and Modern Standard Arabic for gaining access to the context of current social issues, events, debates and opinions related to Islamic political thought.
