Keywords

Bronze Age Aegean archaeology, Greek archaeology, Etruscan archaeology, Roman Mediterranean archaeology, Late Antiquity

Position of the course

This advanced course is an optional course within the Master in Archaeology aimed at deepening the students' understanding of the research field and current debates in Mediterranean archaeology.

Contents

Critical discussion of a series of capita selecta from Mediterranean archaeology, focusing on the Greek, Etruscan and Roman civilisations and their integration with other cultures in the Mediterranean World. The central theme changes every academic year. The language of instruction in this subject is Dutch and English.

Initial competences

This course builds on certain final competences of the undergraduate archaeology course, specifically from the course 'Introduction to Greek and Roman Archaeology and Art' (Ba1). It is strongly recommended to have followed the courses 'Archaeology of Greece', 'Roman Archaeology: the Mediterranean World' and the corresponding practicals 'Material Culture of Greek/Roman Antiquity' (Ba2/3). At least active knowledge of English and passive knowledge of French and Italian are recommended to be able to attend classes and consult professional literature. Translations into English of documents written in Greek (katharevousa and modern demotic) will be provided.

This course unit assumes responsible use of generative artificial intelligence (GAI). Unpublished data should never be entered into GAI tools. The applicable guidelines from Academic Skills are respected throughout the course.

Final competences

- 1 Deepen the complexity of a specific area in our own archaeological research and practice
- 2 Critically analyse new and complex archaeological ideas from the perspective of historical frameworks, social visions and geographical realities
- 3 Have the attitude to use the best research methods in professional archaeological activities or studies
- 4 International archaeological scientific literature original and well-founded critical handling
- 5 To identify independent dynamics, processes or recurrences in complex historical and archaeological situations.
- 6 Value-conscious and nuanced judgments on historical issues and theories
- 7 Have an honest attitude that shows scientific (archaeological) curiosity, critical reflection and an attitude towards lifelong learning
- 8 Writing down your own archaeological research in a high-quality report
- 9 Eigen archeologisch onderzoek presenteren en verantwoorden aan experts, vakgenoten en niet-deskundigen
- 10 Communicating, collaborating and acting in an appropriate manner, in a questioning, inspiring, advisory or authoritative manner.
