African languages, African linguistics

Position of the course

This basic course wants to give students an introductory survey of the African linguistic landscape, regarding both classification and inventory of the languages and structural characteristics.

Contents

This course first identifies, in general terms, the languages and language families spoken on the African continent. For the native languages considerable attention is devoted to the genetic classifications. The linguistic characteristics of the African languages and African language families are subsequently expanded on, and this on phonological, morphological and syntactic levels.

Initial competences

No specific preliminary knowledge required

Final competences

- 1 To have good knowledge of the geographical place of both indigenous and non-indigenous languages of Africa and of the classification of African languages.
- 2 To know and be able to analyze the most important phonological, morphological and syntactic characteristics of African languages.

Extra information on the examination methods

Students are required to hand in weekly homework exercises, which count for 20% of the final grade. Students are required to give a presentation, which counts for 10% of the final grade. The remaining 70% consists of the final exam. A minimum of 10/20 for both periodical and non-periodical evaluation is required. Non-periodical evaluation cannot be repeated in the second exam period. Students who repeat the periodical examination keep the same grade for the non-periodical evaluation.

Calculation of the examination mark

70% periodical (exam), 30% non-periodical (homework exercises and presentation)

Facilities for Working Students

1. Attendance is mandatory.
2. Possible rescheduling of the examination to a different time in the same academic year
3. Feedback can be given by email, telephone or during an appointment during or after office hours
