Position of the course

The course helps students acquire a critical perspective on scientific descriptions of cultural phenomena, more specifically on anthropological descriptions of certain aspects, periods and localities in Africa and the African diaspora. The challenge of this third-year course consists first and foremost in connecting the students' specific expertise in Africa with their general knowledge of cultural diversity. Moreover, the students will expand their understanding of African cultural phenomena as they have been described in anthropological literature.

Contents

The anthropological literature about Africa and the African diaspora is dealt with in ten sessions, which have a descriptive (ethnography of African cultures) and theoretical component

(history of Africanist anthropological debates since 19th century). For the exercise classes, the students will conduct a book review of an anthropological classic. They will also prepare a presentation related to the book review on a particular theme in ethnography.

Initial competences

Students have a basic knowledge of the languages, the geography and the history of Africa.

Final competences

- 1 To demonstrate a basic knowledge about the history of anthropology.
- 2 To demonstrate familiarity with the major trends in the anthropological study of Africa.
- 3 To be able to apply most important anthropological theories to societal and cultural phenomena in Africa.
- 4 To be able to critically assess anthropological analyses of research domains such as diaspora, ethnicity, gender, modernity and globalisation, as well as African studies in Belgium.
- 5 To analyse, synthesise and report in writing on anthropological descriptions and interpretations of societal and cultural phenomena in Africa.
