Position of the course

The bachelor's thesis/researh paper is the capstone at bachelor's level in the development of scientific competences related to independent and critical scientific research.

Contents

In this course, students work on a comprehensive research thesis, on the basis of which they demonstrate their ability to independently conduct high-quality scientific research in the field of art history (heuristics, source criticism, synthesis). The topic of the research thesis is determined by the student in consultation with the supervisor with relevant research expertise. The thesis is a further deepening of the competences acquired in Research Skills II.

Initial competences

Master basic research skills as offered in Research Skills I and II (BA Art History) or equivalent courses.

Final competences

- 1 Be able to develop and delineate a relevant research topic, with a well-defined and justified problem statement.
- 2 Be able to situate a research topic in a broader context, and search and collect relevant literature and resources, using digital capabilities.
- 3 Be able to conduct an original and authentic research independently, with a verifiable conclusion.
- 4 Be able to present a scientific text according to accepted scientific methods and standards, and with a logical structure and careful argumentation.
- 5 Assess the utility of informatics applications in the field of written reporting and deploy them appropriately in scientific research. If generative artificial intelligence is used, this requires an understanding of its operation, limitations, risks and ethical implications for responsible use.

Extra information on the teaching methods

Feedback sessions are organised on a regular basis throughout the academic year, collectively and/or individually. During these feedback sessions, the progress of the Bachelor's thesis is discussed on the basis of interim assignments.

Collective feedback sessions take the form of seminars and/or peer teachings, in which students, under supervision, discuss each other's presentations and work, and receive feedback from the supervisor and/or tutor.

In the case of (additional) individual supervision, the student reports regularly on the developments of the research work to the supervisor and/or tutor, who supervises its smooth progress and makes adjustments if necessary.
