Position of the course
This course is an elective, third-year course. It expands on the overviews given in the first two years of the bachelor. It focuses on American literature and its historical context.

Contents
(The content of this course might still change - by 20th of August at the latest)
An introduction to American literature and culture of the long eighteenth century (c1670-1840), with emphasis on the American Revolution, literary engagements with slavery and Enlightenment philosophy.

Initial competences
English Literature I or acquisition of the skills for literary analysis by other means. Some knowledge of Enlightenment philosophy and the history of slavery and the trans-Atlantic slave trade will be helpful, but is not required to enroll in the course.

Final competences
1 To read texts in a wide variety of genres (novel, poetry, drama, prose essay), paying close and critical attention to the production of meaning at the level of literary language and form
2 To understand major developments in American literature during the long eighteenth century, and to recognize the legacies of slavery and Enlightenment on modern literary culture

(Approved)
3. To write about texts analytically, using both close-reading skills and contextual scholarship to offer original critical commentary

Evaluation methods

continuous assessment

Examination methods in case of periodic evaluation during the first examination period

Examination methods in case of periodic evaluation during the second examination period

Examination methods in case of permanent evaluation

Written assessment, participation, assignment

Possibilities of retake in case of permanent evaluation

Examination during the second examination period is possible in modified form

Calculation of the examination mark

+ Short position paper (~1000–1500 words): 40%
+ In-class presentation (~10 minutes) of short paper: 10%
+ Final essay-response exam or creative project (of your own design): 50%

NB: Extensive and thoughtful participation in class discussions can count for up to 10% of the final course grade, in partial replacement of the position paper or final written assignment. For example, students who attend all class sessions and contribute meaningfully to discussions may—with the instructor’s approval—opt to have their participation count for up to 10% of the final course grade; accordingly, the proportion of the lowest-graded component will be reduced (i.e., the final assignment may count for no lower than 40% or the position paper may count for no lower than 30%).

Facilities for Working Students

1. Working students will be eligible to receive alternative assignments if they cannot attend classes regularly.
2. Working students can make an appointment for feedback on their assignments.
