Theory of literature, general introduction

Position of the course

The course is structured as a survey of schools and methods of modern literary theory (1900-today). The students are given an introduction to the most important critics and conceptual developments that have shaped the field. Specific attention is paid to the impact of these development on the practice of reading. The course is directed to students who are writing their bachelor paper in literary studies. It is meant to foster methodological self-reflection and to encourage students to think through their choice for a methodological framework, by making them aware of the possibilities and limitations inherent in each of them.

Contents

The schools and methods that are dealt with, centrally, are: history of ideas, Russian formalism, Prague structuralism, New Criticism, Nouvelle critique, deconstruction, new historicism, postcolonial criticism. Contemporary methods as gender studies, digital humanities and cognitive approaches are also dealt with.
