Keywords

Latin, literary history, European cultural history, cosmopolitanism

Position of the course

This introductory course explores the importance of Latin and Latin literature for European cultural history, from Late Antiquity til modern times. The course continues in the line of the course on Ancient Literature.

Contents

Students receive an overview of Latin literature within the European context. An introductory lecture examines the concept of a "dead" language and its survival. The remaining lectures provide an overview of Latin literature and its impact on European cultural history. The overview is done in part through selected and representative text passages in Latin and translation.

Students are introduced to the distinctiveness of Latin literature in different historical periods. The story of Latin literature is thereby set within the framework of European history. Political, social and cultural developments in Europe are discussed in so far as they were important for the development of Latin literature.

Initial competences

To have successfully completed the courses Latin: Language competence I and Literature of the Antiquity or to have acquired the necessary skills by other means.

Final competences

- 1 Have knowledge of Latin literature as a European literature
- 2 Have knowledge of the major periods in Latin literary history and of texts and/or authors representative of them.
- 3 Be able to situate Latin writers and texts within the Latin literary history of Europe
- 4 Be able to situate Latin writers and texts against the historical background of their period
- 5 Be able to recognize and indicate in Latin texts characteristics of the different periods in Latin literary history
- 6 Have an understanding of the specific background knowledge needed to read and understand Latin literature from different periods and know how to acquire this knowledge
- 7 Have knowledge of the functioning of the Latin language and literature within European history

Conditions for credit contract

Access to this course unit via a credit contract is unrestricted: the student takes into consideration the conditions mentioned in 'Starting Competences'

Conditions for exam contract

This course unit cannot be taken via an exam contract

Teaching methods

Guided self-study, seminar, self-reliant study activities, lecture: response lecture

Extra information on the teaching methods

Response lecture (opening lecture): contact hours (on campus), in which the theoretical framework is given to understand the narrative of the Latin tradition in Europe

Work colleges (other lectures): contact hours (on campus), in which after a short explanation of the introductory readings, texts are read and discussed in a smaller and in the total group.

Independent work: preparatory reading of introductory texts to the Latin text passages to be read in the seminars.

Guided self-study: under supervision and in dialogue the preparation of one's own short comparison and assessment of a small corpus of texts that have been read during the course

Learning materials and price

Syllabus and textbook with Latin excerpts provided online by the instructor.

Thorough command of Latin as acquired during the course units in the first semester (Latin: Language Proficiency I, Literature of Antiquity) is assumed to be known. Evidence of failure in this area may result in a failure to pass the entire exam.

Having less than 10/20 in any of the above components may result in a failure to pass the entire course unit. If the final score would still be a grade of ten or more out of twenty, it will be reduced to the highest failing grade.

(If the student did not pass the non-period evaluation, a second chance will be offered through a compensatory activity between the first and second examination periods.)

Facilities for Working Students

Facilities:

1 Possibility of exemption from attendance with substitute literature assignment after consultation with responsible teacher.

2 Possibility of exam at other time within the academic year.

3 Possibility of feedback after making an appointment during office hours.
