Position of the course

This advanced course offers the students insight in the structures of Mesopotamian society on a social, institutional and economic level, as well as in the nature and evolution of the Mesopotamian religion and its expression in the mythological texts.

Exchange students may take up this course unit, for which no prior knowledge of Dutch is required, as exchange students will be set an alternative exam.

Contents

The lectures provide students with an insight in the social and religious structures of Mesopotamia through thematic classes (money and market, private and institutional, bureaucracy and law, social classes and gender, science and philosophy, cosmogonic and anthropogonic mythological traditions, temple and sacrifice, rituals, magic and medicine) in which case studies are explored in depth on the basis of visual material and excerpts of historical, literary and administrative sources.

Within the framework of a project (the topic of which changes annually, e.g. "the role and function of women in the society and religion of Mesopotamia”), the student will be taught in seminars how to consult and critically process secondary sources and primary sources (in translation) in order to be able to write a paper and give a presentation on a chosen subject within the topic of the project.

Initial competences

To have passive knowledge of English, French and German (to be able to consult specialist literature).

Final competences

- 1 To be able to show an overall insight in the structures of Mesopotamian society on a social, institutional and economical, as well as in the nature and evolution of the Mesopotamian religion and its expression in the mythological texts.
- 2 To have insight in various aspects of the Mesopotamian social and religious structures discussed in the thematic classes and case-studies.
- 3 To be able to interpret the archaeological and epigraphic sources discussed in class and to be able to evaluate their significance for Mesopotamian society and religion.
- 4 To be able to consult and critically process secondary sources and primary sources (in translation).
- 5 To be able to write a paper on a subject chosen within the framework of the topic of the project.
- 6 To be able to give a presentation on a subject chosen within the framework of the topic of the project.

Course content-related study coaching

The lectures are interactive: the content of the thematic classes and case-studies are discussed in an interactive and demand-driven way during the lectures.

Within the framework of the seminars, the students are taught to consult and critically process secondary sources and primary sources (in translation) in order to write a paper and give a presentation on a subject chosen within the framework of the theme of the project. These seminars are highly interactive by using the flipped classroom method. The course is concluded by microteaching sessions in which the students present orally their papers and take part in a final group discussion.

After the examinations there is individual feedback regarding the written examination and the paper.

Because of Covid 19, forms of education and evaluation may be subject to deviations. Such deviations will be communicated via Ufora.
