Keywords

Language, multilingualism, globalisation, diversity, ideology, education

Position of the course

This course invites students to develop a perspective on a number of contemporary challenges posed by conditions of globalisation, incl. multilingualism and diversity, and to do so with specific reference to the implications for school policy and teaching practice. What are the conceptual tools needed to understand and map these developments?

Contents

1. What is globalisation? Its historical context. Different conceptual models (flows, scale, friction, trajectory, etc.). Overview of relevant transnational landscapes (cf. - scapes, Appadurai).
2. Language in times of globalisation. Diversity and linguistic diversity. The imperative to rethink "language" and "linguistic repertoire". European (national and regional) multilingualism, multilingualism worldwide (North/South) and migration-affected multilingualism.
3. Migration/international mobility, language and integration: language political agendas, education for newcomers, language certification and the CEFR, language assessment.
4. Language and education: multilingualism, Dutch and inequality at school and in the classroom; L2-Dutch as a specific challenge.
5. Comparing the Flemish context with other "national" contexts (incl. Spanish and English in the USA; migration-related multilingualism in Scandinavia and Northern Europe).

6. Commercial "customised" multilingualism. Is it relevant for classroom practice?

7. Translation and interpreting in the classroom.

Initial competences

Bachelor of Arts in Linguistics and Literature.

Final competences

- 1 Develop a conceptual understanding of processes of globalisation, language and diversity, incl. interconnecting dynamics. Develop a critical evaluation of the assumptions underneath theoretical models and educational policy.
- 2 Capacity to analyse and interpret relevant developments in contemporary school and classroom contexts. To be able to situate these developments in a broader social and sociolinguistic analysis.
- 3 Reflect in a practice-oriented way on the potential of specific linguistic and diversity-oriented strategies in learning environments - in classrooms and elsewhere (formal and informal learning environments).

Extra information on the examination methods

Students will be expected to develop an analysis of empirical data and write a report about this.

The report will be one of the topics during the oral examination.

Calculation of the examination mark

The written report represents 35% of the final mark for the course (7/20).

Students who obtain a mark lower than 10/20 for one of the two parts, cannot obtain a pass mark for the course as a whole. In those cases where the average overall mark is higher than 10/20, the final mark will be reduced to the highest non-pass mark (= 9).
