Keywords

Arabic grammar, Arabic literary heritage, Arabic intellectual heritage, social thought, political thought

Position of the course

This course builds on the competences acquired in the courses Introduction to the Structures of Arabic (language and text) and Structures of Arabic (language and texts): historical thinking. It engages in more depth with topics encountered in, or related to, the courses Introduction to the History of Islamic West Asia, Introduction to Islam and Being a Muslim, and Politics of the Contemporary Middle East. This course familiarizes the student with philosophical, legal and literary Arabic text genres concerning political thought from the pre-modern Islamic world, with their social and political impact and meaning in the past and the present, with their place in a long tradition of thinking about human coexistence and power, and with the specific properties of their grammatical structures.

Contents

This course consists of two components: structures of texts and structures of language.

- Structures of texts is devoted to the contextualization and study of literary-philosophical and juristic texts from the pre-modern Islamic heritage that belong to the tradition of political thought. Close reading, contextualization, and structural analysis are central, including an intensive introduction to socio-political thinking in an Islamic framework, and its modern study.
- Language structures focuses on the grammatical analysis of the studied texts, especially with an eye for morphology and for the Arabic grammatical instruments.

Initial competences

To have successfully completed 'Introduction to Arabic Language and Text Structures' and 'Arabic Language and Text Structures: Historical Thinking' or to have acquired the intended competencis in another way.

Final competences

1 The student translates texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical

- heritage with the help of the dictionary.
- 2 The student identifies the main points from texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage.
  - 3 The student analyzes texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage with an eye for language structures.
  - 4 The student explains the characteristics of texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage.
  - 5 The student knows the most frequent reading strategies for texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage.
  - 6 The student contextualizes texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage.
  - 7 The student knows the grammatical structures that occur most frequently in texts from the Arabic literary, legal and philosophical heritage.
  - 8 The student reflects on an abstract level about the form, function and meaning of various Arabic literary, legal and philosophical texts
  - 9 The student participates in discussions and debates about Arabic literary, legal and philosophical texts in an adequate and tolerant manner.
  - 10 The student actively connects Arabic literary, legal and philosophical texts and debates about them with the contents and insights acquired in other relevant course units.

Assessment moments

end-of-term and continuous assessment

Examination methods in case of periodic assessment during the first examination period

Written assessment

Examination methods in case of periodic assessment during the second examination period

Written assessment

Examination methods in case of permanent assessment

Participation

Possibilities of retake in case of permanent assessment examination during the second examination period is possible in modified form

Extra information on the examination methods

Written exam on the entire course material (language structures and text structures).

Participation: active participation during class and completing assignments and tasks on time.

Calculation of the examination mark

Text structures: 70 %

Language structures: 30 %

Both parts are subdivided into end-of-term evaluation and continuous assessment (active participation during classes, and tests and assignments).

Students who do not participate in (one of the parts of) the assessment, or have a mark below 10/20 for one of the assessed parts, automatically fail the entire course. Final marks higher than 10/20 will, in this case, be reduced to the highest mark that does not qualify for automatic upgrade ('deliberation') (7/20).

A pass mark for one of the assessed parts means that the assessment of that part does not need to be retaken in case of a resit (only!). Students are nevertheless free to decide to retake it.

Facilities for Working Students

Student attendance of classes is compulsory.

The examination cannot be rescheduled

Feedback can be given by email, telephone or during an appointment during office hours.
