Teaching languages

English, Dutch

Keywords

Ancient Greek, papyrology, epigraphy, codicology, paleography, textual transmission, textual criticism

Position of the course

This course intends to offer students insight into how and in which circumstances the ancient Greek texts have come to us today. It introduces them to the original sources of those texts (inscriptions, papyri, manuscripts), and explains the history of script, book culture, and philology.

Contents

This course offers students insight into the material and historical circumstances of the transmission of ancient Greek texts. Students get acquainted with the development of Greek writing, from its origins to the invention of print. The course intends to teach skills (the ability to decipher inscriptions, papyri and manuscripts, with an emphasis on the latter), and at the same time to teach insight into the cultural and historical context of scribal culture, textual transmission, and philology. Finally, the course teaches the basic notions of textual criticism (critical editions of texts, methods of philology) and the basic tools of the disciplines of epigraphy, papyrology and palaeography.

Initial competences

Final competences

- 1 To read the original sources of ancient Greek texts (inscriptions, papyri, manuscripts), and to transcribe them in a methodologically correct way
- 2 Situate Greek inscriptions, papyri and manuscripts (chronologically, historically and culturally) on the basis of their external features and writing style

- 3 To know the intellectual and cultural developments that influenced the ancient and medieval transmission and study of texts
- 4 To be acquainted with the ancient and medieval material features of textual transmission (writing tools, material features of papyrus and manuscript, and roll and codex).
- 5 To distinguish, identify, date, and situate the diverse styles and phases in the development of Greek writing
- 6 To use the most important paper and digital tools for the study of Greek inscriptions, papyri, and manuscripts.
- 7 To be acquainted with the methods of scientific critical editions of ancient Greek texts.
