Position of the course

This course continues Introduction to Structures of Arabic (Languages and Texts). It builds on the courses Introduction to the history of Islamic West Asia (600-1800) and Introduction to Islam and Being a Muslim. It concerns a thorough introduction to Arabic historiographical literature and to Islamic historical thinking, as part of Islamic intellectual history. This course familiarizes the student with various Arabic historiographical genres and texts in the Islamic world and the way in which they are used in past and present.

Contents

This course consists of two components: text structures and languages structures.

- In text structures, various historiographical texts from the pre-modern Islamic world are read and studied, in particular chronicles, biographies, and biographical dictionaries, This is framed in a thorough deepening of the knowledge of Arabic historiographical literature and of Islamic historical thought, from the late antique to the modern period.
- In language structures, the (study of the) structure of the Arabic language is discussed in more detail, in close interaction with the text material from the text structures component.

Extra information on the examination methods

Written exam: language & texts

Participation: class attendance and assignments

Calculation of the examination mark

Text structures: 70 %

Language structures: 30 %

Both parts are subdivided into end-of-term evaluation and continuous assessment (active participation during classes, and tests and assignments).

Students who do not participate in (one of the parts of) the assessment, or have a mark below 10/20 for one of the assessed components, automatically fail the entire course. Final marks higher than 10/20 will, in this case, be reduced to the highest mark that does not qualify for automatic upgrade ('deliberation') (7/20).

A pass mark for one of the assessed components means that the assessment of that component does not need to be retaken in case of a resit (only!). Students are nevertheless free to decide to retake it.

Facilities for Working Students

1. Student attendance is compulsory
2. The examination cannot be rescheduled
3. Feedback can be given by email, telephone or during an appointment during office hours
