Position of the course

This course is one of the eighteen research seminars that constitute the core of the master programme.

Depending on initial qualifications, students enrol for three or five such research seminars.

Contents

In this seminar students learn to examine normative issues regarding gender, sexuality and diversity from an ethical-philosophical and moral-anthropological background. The course introduces key texts in feminist philosophy and ethical theory, the philosophy of sexuality and intersectional and postcolonial theory. Guided by the research expertise of the lecturers, students will learn how to explore pivotal topics from a critical and interdisciplinary perspective. The course contains introductory sessions, guided self-study, discussion seminars and plenary exercises.

For students enrolled in the research master detailed information is available on the Ufora-site 'ReMa Philosophy General Information'.

Initial competences

Knowledge of philosophy and ethics of gender, sexuality and diversity at intermediate level.

Competent in philosophical writing and argumentation.

Final competences

- 1 Ability to formulate original and innovative research problems based on the duly founded insight into the internationally recognised state-of-the-art in philosophy and ethics of gender, sexuality and diversity.
- 2 Ability to work out original solutions to the selected research problems, and argue for them clearly and convincingly.
- 3 Ability to deepen one's knowledge of philosophy and ethics of gender, sexuality and diversity independently.
- 4 Ability to report on research orally (for academic peers) in a clearly-understood manner.
