Position of the course

The aims of the study unit "Russian Language Practice I" (R1PI) are as follows:

- to teach the students the Russian alphabet;
- to teach the students the correct pronunciation and intonation;
- to acquire basic vocabulary;
- to apply grammatical rules in practice;
- to produce oral and written texts;
- to understand oral and written texts.

The study unit "Russian: Language Practice I" (R1PI) applies knowledge and insights acquired in the study unit "Russian: Grammar I" (R1GI).

Contents

The study unit "Russian Language Practice I" (R1PI) consists of the following sub-units:

- Phonetics (R1PI_FO)
- Speaking skills (R1PI_SP)
- Writing skills (R1PI_SC)

R1PI_FO: Students are introduced to the most important aspects of Russian pronunciation, such as the difference between hard and soft consonants, the assimilation of consonants, the reduction of vowels in unstressed syllables and typical intonation patterns. Special attention is paid to mistakes attributable to mother-tongue interference. Students are required to have a theoretical basis in Russian phonetics, but the main focus is on putting phonetic rules into practice.

R1PI_SP: Students are trained in both listening and speaking skills. Their vocabulary is expanded on the basis of various lexical themes, such as "introducing yourself", "daily routine", "leisure time" etc. The required verbs and grammatical constructions are practised orally.

R1PI_SC: Students practise cases and verbs mainly through written exercises. Emphasis is placed on expressing spatial relationships. Their vocabulary is expanded on the basis of various lexical themes such as "the house", "life in town" etc.
