Position of the course

In this course we will read and analyse Vergil's Aeneid, using a relevant theoretical framework and in dialogue with modern insights.

Contents

This course familiarizes students with some of the various problems associated with reading Virgil's Aeneid as historical literature. The lectures are devoted to the intensive reading of the Aeneid, one or two books at a time. We start from a number of questions we can ask about the text and we look at which methods and theories allow us to answer such questions systematically. The approach is eclectic, always self-reflexive and grounded in recent insights and methodology. We go beyond formalistic and historicising reading methods, and also use narratological analyses, intertextuality, cultural studies and anthropological approaches, metapoetical analyses, gender studies (...).

In preparation, the students read one/two books of the Aeneid (about one-third in Latin and the rest in translation). In addition students weekly write short assessments, on topics related to a certain literary, theoretical or historical approach. Six workshops are organised on the basics of textual transmission, metrics and stylistics. The students practice under supervision in the use of basic elements of the codicology, metrics and stylistics. Through the lectures, workshops and online assignments, we gain a better insight into the status of theory and methodology, as well as the multiformity of Virgil's masterpiece.

Oral examination: open book exam (including written preparation) with 3 questions (situating, paraphrasing, literary analysis)

Written examination: five application questions about the Latin text; a question about metrics & stylistics; a question about paleography

Permanent evaluation of the individual contributions on Ufora and of the presentation of the smallgroup case.

If student fail the non-periodical evaluation, a second chance is offered through a compensatory activity between the first and second examination period.

The examination is in line with the envisaged competencies of the course.

Calculation of the examination mark

Periodical: written 30%, oral 40%

Non-periodical (contributions Ufora; smallgroup presentation): 30 %.

If students score less than 10/20 for one of the course units, they cannot pass the course. In this case, the mark will be reduced to the highest unsuccessful grade, should the final score be ten or more out of twenty. If students demonstrate insufficient command of the Latin text during the written examination, they will also fail the course. They may take a reexamination in which only the knowledge of the Latin text is tested.
