Keywords

Latin literatures, European literatures, literary models, cosmopolitan literatures, confrontation analysis, rewriting vs. remodelling, materiality, manuscripts their cultural contexts

Position of the course

This in-depth course deepens students' familiarity with the totality of Latin literature as well as its role within the creation of European literature and literatures. It provides insight into the creation of canons, of factors that determine the creation and appreciation of a (cosmopolitan) literature and of the interactive fact of the literary universe. Special attention is also paid to the materiality of pre- and early-modern literature (manuscripts, early printings).

Contents

The section starts with a general introduction regarding the theme that will be central to the course and around which specific Latin texts will be selected and read. These texts come from different periods of Latin literary history which will be confronted with each other. Special attention will be paid to actual and material transmission, to possible reworking, reception, rewriting but also to differences and contrasts, especially insofar as these are important in the assessment of a cosmopolitan literature. Great activity and responsibility is required of the student in view of the fragments to be read and discussed. Part of the corpus may have to be processed as independent reading.

Initial competences

Having taken Latin: language proficiency I, Latin: language proficiency II and Latin Linguistics I, or having acquired the necessary skills by other means.

Having taken Latin Literature I, Latin literature II and Reading of Latin Texts, or having acquired the necessary skills by other means.

Final competences

- 1 Be able to indicate, recognize and describe the influence of Latin literature as a cosmopolitan literature on later literary developments, both within Latin literature itself and within other European literatures.
- 2 Being able to perform independent research on literary dialogues between literatures from different historical periods and to present the results in a didactically suitable manner.
- 3 Being able to perform (formal, intertextual, contextual and comparative) literary analyses on genres and texts.
- 4 Be able to perform comparative literary analysis in diachronic and synchronic perspectives on texts.
- 5 Know and be able to recognize the idiosyncrasies of literary genres and be able to analyze and describe the liberties that authors take with them.
- 6 Understanding the emergence of Latin literature as cosmopolitan literature, both materially and literarily with special attention to the key concepts in literary studies (text, book, literature, library...)

Thorough command of Latin as acquired in secondary education and during the course units in Ba1 (Latin: Language Proficiency I & II) is known. Evidence of failure in this area may result in a fail for the entire exam.

If one has less than 10/20 for one of the above 3 components, one can no longer pass the entire course unit. If the final score would still be a grade of ten or more out of twenty, it will be reduced to the highest failing grade.

Facilities for Working Students

Facilities:

1 Possible exemption from educational activities requiring student attendance; a task is imposed in substitution after discussion with the lecturer

2 Possible rescheduling of the examination to a different time in the same academic year

3 Feedback can be given during an appointment during office hours
