Keywords

Adaptation, historical game studies, intermediality, literary gaming, narratology, video games

Position of the course

Course Title: Video Game Perspectives on Anglophone Literature and History

This course provides the opportunity to study the relationship between video games, narrative, and history, discussing how modern games build on the Anglophone literary tradition but also depart from established literary techniques.

Position of the course in terms of language proficiency: In the third year of the bachelor programme in English, students are expected to further consolidate a C1 level of proficiency ("Expert"/"Effective operational" proficiency).

Exchange students can enrol for this course, provided they meet the requirements stipulated in this document. No knowledge of Dutch is required for this course.

Contents

This course offers an introduction to contemporary narratological scholarship on video games, focusing on dimensions such as characterization, environmental storytelling, multilinear progression, and the interaction between gameplay and narrative. Moreover, the course familiarizes the students with the concepts of remediation, intermediality, and adaptation, and with the game-theoretical approaches of literary gaming and historical game studies.

Students will engage with a number of examples of games that draw inspiration from Anglophone literature and history, or speak to various aspects of (contemporary) Anglophone culture. Prior experience with video games is not required.

Initial competences

To have completed "English Literature I" and "English Literature II" or to have acquired the necessary skills by other means. To master English at an initial C1 level (i.e. C1.1, First stage of "Expert"/"Effective operational" proficiency).

Final competences

- 1 General knowledge of scholarly approaches to video games, with particular focus on the use of various narrative techniques and historical representations in games.
- 2 The ability to critically engage with a number of games and position them vis-à-vis their literary models as well as larger cultural questions.
- 3 An understanding of continuities and discontinuities between literary and video game storytelling and the ability to relate them to the concepts of adaptation, intermediality, and remediation.
- 4 The enhancement of analytical skills, including those of close reading, the use of scholarship, and the formation of a distinct academic point-of-view.
