Position of the course

This course unit builds on the language competences from the first year bachelor, to perpetuate and deepen them. It aims to further develop students' writing and reading skills on not too specialised or not too technical topics. It also focuses on further vocabulary acquisition. Exchange students may take up this course unit.

Contents

On the basis of a content and form analysis of authentic French documents, students learn to correctly write texts themselves. Attention is paid to text structure, coherence and cohesion, register and precise wording. During the lessons, vocabulary is also expanded thematically and a number of relevant grammatical principles are covered.

Initial competences

The final competences of the different study units French of the first bachelor year.

Final competences

- 1 Interpret, analyse and assess written communication adequately.
- 2 Possess knowledge and understanding of text production in French.
- 3 Write well-structured texts of limited scope and diverse nature, correctly applying the relevant rules of grammar and critically evaluating texts with justification of text type adapted to purpose, audience and medium.
- 4 Create relational coherence in a text by using varied signal words.
