Keywords

French-Dutch translation, museum translation, collective translation, translation for a specific target audience, interaction between translation practice and theoretical reflection.

Position of the course

In the course 'Translation French-Dutch: cultural contexts', students build upon the knowledge and practical translation experience gained from 'Introduction to Translation Studies' (BA1) and 'Dutch: translation from the foreign language' (BA2). Central are also the skills developed during the courses 'Dutch: language proficiency' (BA1) and 'Dutch: writing skills' (BA2).

The course aims to introduce students to various aspects related to museum translation through a collective translation task in an authentic context: collaboration, communication with the client, reflection on the interaction between theoretical knowledge and translation practice, translating for a specific audience. The collective student translations, after correction by the supervising lecturer, will effectively function in the target culture, in a French-speaking museum aiming to attract Dutch-speaking visitors.

Contents

Students will undertake a real-life translation assignment from a French-speaking museum, which they will carry out in small groups. The course consists of a field trip to the museum site at the beginning of the semester, two introductory lectures, two feedback sessions, and a group work.

During the introductory lectures, we present the museum partner, analyze the key features of the source text and evaluate heuristic tools that can be used during the project. We focus on relevant theoretical concepts from the field of museum translation (text types, multimodality, terminology) and from translation didactics (interference, coherence, skopos). The group work is partly self-organised by the students, taking into account intermediate deadlines and giving them the opportunity to ask questions during feedback sessions.

The course as a whole is conceived as a cohesive translation project that integrates various aspects: process and product, technique and reflection.

Initial competences

Students are able to understand and contextualize French museum texts of average to high difficulty. They recognize and accurately translate realia and culture-specific elements. They have a command of Dutch at the level of a professional native language user.

Final competences

- 1 Having a command of Dutch at professional native speaker level in terms of comprehension, oral and writing skills.
- 2 Having a command of French at C1 level the "Common European Framework of Reference for Languages" for comprehension (listening and reading), oral skills (interaction) and writing skills.
- 3 Adequately interpreting written and oral communication in French, including messages of a specialised nature.
- 4 Recognising and independently interpreting language structures and language variation in French, with close attention for contrastive aspects compared to Dutch.
- 5 Applying knowledge of the cultural and institutional context of the French and Dutch language areas in the interpretation and translation of written texts.
- 6 Independently translating texts with a high degree of difficulty from French into Dutch, with attention for purpose, target group and media.
- 7 Using relevant dictionaries, reference works and electronic aids (search engines, machine translation, AI) adequately and critically.

- 8 Being familiar with theories and concepts from the field of Translation Studies to analyse the translation process.
- 9 Developing a sensitivity to the similarities, differences and interactions between cultures.
- 10 Based on acquired intercultural competences, acting tactfully and professionally in different communicative situations.
- 11 Critically reflecting on their own thinking, learning, decisions and actions.
