Position of the course

The objective of "Turkish: Redaction Techniques and Translation" is

- to train the flexibility in reasoning and the transfer of thoughts in order to enable the student's capacity to define them adequately and fluently in written Turkish.

Another objective is to perfect the students' grammatical and lexical linguistic knowledge and to draw their attention to cultural aspects in linguistic writing skills.

- to give the students an insight into the translation process from Turkish to Dutch, to emphasize the importance of cultural aspects in translation and to train them in using the correct translation routines.

Students are trained to use specific heuristic resources and to support a written translation in a responsible manner (parallel texts, bibliography, ...)

Contents

The unit "Turkish: Redaction Techniques and Translation" is thematically ordered and consists of:

- on the one hand proficiency in Turkish; written summary in Turkish; written translation Dutch - Turkish with special attention to terminology and standard constructions, and to parallel texts
- on the other hand we also focus on translating from Turkish to Dutch. A theoretical introduction (a survey of translation routines illustrated with translated texts and of an adequate use of dictionaries and other heuristic resources) is followed by translation tasks (with sociocultural content, varied in style, text genre and register) with group review.
