Teaching languages

Dutch

Keywords

Translation into Dutch, Translation Studies, applied translation strategies, transfer of meaning, text analysis, writing skills in Dutch, contrastive linguistics, translation didactics

Position of the course

The course offers a language-independent part where, on the one hand, theoretical concepts from BA1 ('Introduction to Translation Studies') are reiterated and applied, and, on the other, ample attention is paid to cross-linguistic translation techniques, critical use of reference works, and Dutch writing skills (in line with the BA1 course 'Dutch: language proficiency' and the BA2 course 'Dutch: writing skills').

In the language-specific seminars, students learn to identify style and rhetoric figures in the foreign language. They are stimulated to reflect on the various ways in which meaning is generated, and on techniques or strategies to convey that meaning to a new target audience, in a new target culture. This reflexive attitude later forms the basis for translating specialized texts (in the MA program), such as economic, medical, or legal texts, texts from the world of art and culture, and literary texts.

Contents

The language-independent lectures provide a supportive framework within which writing skills (Dutch) and translation techniques are developed, and where students reflect on their own translation competencies and learning path.

For the language-specific seminars, students translate authentic texts related to current social issues at home. During class, they learn to recognize translation problems, rephrase texts into idiomatic Dutch, and become familiar with the transformations a source text undergoes in translation. The lecturers focus on particular and common translation problems for each language pair. Students become acquainted with the applicable standards within the professional translation world, while also deepening their knowledge of the culture of the foreign language.

Initial competences

N2VN, builds further on knowledge and skills acquired during the courses 'Dutch: language proficiency' (BA1), 'Dutch: writing skills' (BA2), 'Introduction to Translation Studies' (BA1), and 'History and culture' (BA1 or BA2). For the school languages English, French and German, we start from insights gained in translation and/or contrastive linguistics from BA1. For all other foreign languages, this course is the first introduction to translation into Dutch.

Final competences

- 1 Having a command of Dutch at professional native speaker level in terms of comprehension, oral and writing skills [with assessment].
- 2 Having knowledge and understanding of the cultural and institutional context of the language areas concerned and for the intercultural relations and differences, and applying these in the interpretation, translation and production of written and oral text [without assessment].
- 3 Having knowledge and understanding of text production and translation processes [with assessment].
- 4 Critically reflecting on their own thinking, learning, decisions and actions [without assessment].
- 5 Displaying intellectual curiosity and a lifelong learning attitude [without assessment].

assessment].

- 6 Adequately interpreting, analysing, written communication [with assessment].
- 7 Independently translating texts of average difficulty from the foreign language into Dutch that are faithful to the content of the source [with assessment].
- 8 Independently translating texts of average difficulty from the foreign language into Dutch that are faithful to the content of the source [with assessment].
- 9 Having knowledge of electronic aids, using them adequately and efficiently, and critically evaluating them [without assessment].
- 10 Having knowledge of the transfer of meaning [with assessment].
- 11 Being able to identify cultural specific elements in the source text. Applying strategies to render cultural specific elements in translation [with assessment].

Teaching methods

Seminar, Lecture, Independent work

Extra information on the teaching methods

All students prepare a translation at home on a (nearly) weekly basis. During the language-specific seminars, extensive attention is paid to the translation problems and errors on which students will be evaluated during the exam. In the language-independent seminars, students are introduced to more general concepts and techniques for translating from the foreign language.

No recordings are made of the language-specific seminars. Recordings of the language-independent courses may be made available on demand but they are (1) subject to technical feasibility, and (2) only for working students and students who are unable to attend classes for medical reasons.

Extra information on the examination methods

During the semester, the students take a short written test that assesses their knowledge of pragmatic insights and theoretical concepts from the language-independent lectures.

During the exam period, students produce a Dutch translation of one or two texts written in a foreign language, depending on the number of foreign languages they have included in their curriculum. The texts or text fragments are related to contemporary societal developments.

In the august/september session, the knowledge test and the translation test are held on the same day.

Calculation of the examination mark

Students with two foreign languages in their curriculum (5 credits):

- exam translation 1 = 45% of the final score
- exam translation 2 = 45%
- semester test language-independent content = 10%

Students with only one foreign language in their curriculum (3 credits):

- exam translation = 90% of the final score
- semester test language-independent content = 10%

A passing grade for 1 exam part in the june session can be carried over to the august/september session.
