Teaching languages

Dutch

Keywords

Status of Dutch in Belgium/Flanders; Multilingualism; Globalization; Language & Identity; Language & Emancipation

Position of the course

The goal of this course is to provide students with insight into the changing status of the Dutch language in relation to other languages, within the context of globalization and the increasing share of 'non-native' speakers in the Flemish/Belgian population.

IMPORTANT NOTE REGARDING PROGRAM REFORM:

Students who have included the course Dutch Linguistics III: Language Use in their curriculum before the 2025-2026 academic year are not permitted to take the course Dutch Linguistics: Multilingualism and Language Policy (due to overlapping content).

Contents

With Belgian/Flemish language legislation, attempts have been made to prevent tensions between Dutch and French speakers from escalating. As a result, this legislation focuses almost exclusively on the relationship between Dutch and French. Meanwhile, in Belgium/Flanders, hundreds of thousands of people speak many other languages, either as their first or second language: the more prestigious English alongside Moroccan Arabic, Turkish, Polish, etc. What does this mean for the position of Dutch in Flanders and Brussels? Should Dutch be further protected against these "foreign" languages? Or should the legislation create more room for the use of these "new" languages in education, administration, etc.?

Possible subthemes: Belgian language legislation / Flemish language decrees; domain loss; ELF - English as a Lingua Franca; English as a third administrative language; European language/language policy; French in Flanders; multilingualism; Dutch as part of an integration process; Dutch / Dutch-language education in Brussels; language and emancipation; language and identity; language censuses; territoriality principle vs personality principle.

Initial competences basic knowledge of the Dutch language system and use (cf. Bachelor)

Final competences

- 1 Students can explain the Belgian/Flemish language legislation.
- 2 Students can demonstrate how the Belgian/Flemish language legislation is the result of specific time- and context-bound tensions between the Dutch-speaking and French-speaking communities.
- 3 Students can define and identify different forms of societal and individual multilingualism.
- 4 Students can acquire knowledge about the status of other languages in Belgium/Flanders (number of speakers, domains of use, etc.) based on a critical analysis of sources.
- 5 Students can explain the factors that have led to significant changes in the linguistic landscape of Belgium/Flanders in recent decades.
- 6 Students can outline the challenges posed by the new linguistic landscape and reflect on the role that language policy plays in this context.
- 7 Students are able to distinguish the principles that guide people's views in the debate on how to manage multilingualism: language as a 'marker of identity', language as a 'signal of the intention to integrate', the 'territoriality principle' versus 'individual language freedom', etc.
- 8 Students are able to compare the Belgian/Flemish linguistic situation with that of other countries/regions in order to highlight both the unique and the general aspects of the Belgian language situation.

In all courses, Dutch students are expected to further develop their competencies in reading, listening, writing, and speaking skills through lesson preparation, during lessons, when giving presentations, writing papers, or taking oral or written exams.

Therefore, in this course, the evaluation also expects a level of language proficiency that corresponds to the position of the course in the curriculum.

Facilities for Working Students

- 1 Attendance in the seminars is strongly recommended, but not mandatory. For working students, class recordings may be provided.
- 2 Possibility to take the exam at a different time within the academic year.
- 3 Possibility for feedback by appointment.
