Simultaneous interpreting Russian - Dutch

Position of the course

The aim of this study unit is to train various skills required for the technique of simultaneous interpretation, whereby the interpreter translates the speaker's message almost simultaneously while the latter is speaking, something that requires perfect control of simultaneous input and output. To deploy this technique successfully, various skills are trained, including those of memory, listening skills, understanding the source language, summarising, formulation, anticipation and instant problem resolution.

Students with Dutch as A-language should eventually be able to interpret formal and informal speeches by speakers speaking in regional accents, in a conference situation (interpreting booths) from Russian into correct, rich and idiomatic Dutch, paying due attention to the internal cohesion of the text and the essence of the message, without too many omissions, presented in a pleasant fashion, with appropriate intonation and in a suitable register.

Students with Russian as A-language should eventually be able to interpret formal and informal speeches by speakers speaking in regional accents, in a conference situation (interpreting booths) from Russian into fluent and, to the listener, comprehensible Dutch, paying due attention to the internal cohesion of the text and the essence of the message, without too many omissions, presented in a pleasant fashion, with appropriate intonation and in a standard language acceptable to the mother-tongue listener.

Contents

Attention is paid to both the technique of simultaneous interpretation and to understanding and interpreting texts (speeches) on a wide range of topics and of varying degrees of difficulty. We start with simple and well-structured texts (speeches) that do not pose too great a challenge in terms of content and technique, but gradually, we move on to more challenging topics. During this process, students are taught how to listen, speak and monitor the quality of their interpreting all at the same time. This involves, among others, analysing and identifying the core message, anticipating, decalage, waiting, following, changing the pace, handling syntactically different language systems, dealing with figures and proper names, monitoring one's own output, intonation and voice, microphone technique and collaboration with colleagues in the interpreting booth. Students are also gradually exposed to different regional accents, technically more complex topics, extemporaneous interpreting etc.

Initial competences

The student:

- has an excellent command of Russian and Dutch, whereby Dutch, or Russian, is the A-language selected by the student;
- has a very broad general knowledge about a wide range of topics, including politics, economics, culture, technology and science;
- has an adequate command of consecutive interpreting;
- is stress-resistant and displays sustained powers of concentration.

Final competences

- 1 The student is able to interpret a speech of some length simultaneously from Russian into Dutch.
- 2 Moreover, the student with Dutch as A-language is able to achieve a professional conference-interpreting level, both in terms of cohesion and of rendering the essence of the message, thereby making use of a correct, rich and idiomatic standard language and brought in a pleasant manner, with the appropriate intonation and in a suitable register.
- 3 The student with Russian as A-language is able to achieve a professional conference-interpreting level, both in terms of cohesion and rendering the essence of the message, and in terms of presentation and intonation.
- 4 The student with Russian as A-language is able to achieve a level acceptable to a mother-tongue listener in terms of using the standard language and pronunciation. The level achieved is sufficient to establish a reliable relay.

Course content-related study coaching

The interpreting assignments are continually assessed, both individually and in group. For this purpose, we draw on sound recordings or renditions listened to in real time. We constantly seek to remedy any shortcomings by setting individual tasks, and additional feedback is given in a mock conference, in which the entire team of lecturers is involved.
