French: intercultural project

Position of the course

The course unit 'French: Intercultural Project' (F3IP) aims for students to deepen their knowledge of the language area in question in an independent manner and to use this knowledge in a project assignment.

The project assignment consists of:

going through a reading assignment related to the (inter)cultural and institutional backgrounds of the language area concerned, optionally contacting and interviewing organisations or private individuals in line with the themes covered therein. In the interviews, the student makes a creative addition to the content from the reading assignment and shows a personal reflection on the relevant social, scientific and/or ethical problems, and on the similarities and differences between cultures reporting orally and in writing on the completed assignment

Contents

The course unit 'French: Intercultural Project' (F3IP) includes:

- an introductory lecture that discusses the objectives and practical modalities of the project, the lecture assignment for each language and the contents of the independently processed chapters on 'Conducting a journalistic interview' and 'Interview article' (see course materials);
- processing reading assignment independently;
- keeping a log of the written and oral activities carried out;
- an oral presentation presenting the main results of the assignments;
- an oral examination on the reading assignment.
